ARTIST LIMITED EDITIONS FEATURING PAST AND UPCOMING LOCUST PROJECTS ARTISTS

Toby Barnes

Bal Ganesh 3, Bal Shiva 3, Meenakshi, 2016

The Bal Series (2016) is an exploration of the artist as creator and the themes of birth, fertility, and new beginnings. It is a very personal series that reflects my own life experiences of becoming a father. Each of these paintings engages in this exploration through a practice found in many parts of Asia of painting deities as infants and children. This practice has centered on representations, or avatars, of gods and goddesses as children ("Bal"). It is a practice unique to the region and important to its culture. For this series, I've created a triptych representing three child-like representations of gods: Bal Ganesh—an avatar of the elephant god, god of new beginnings and remover of obstacles; Bal Shiva—an avatar of the god of creation and destruction; and Teenage Minakshi—an avatar of Parvati, the goddess of fertility. The stories of these child avatars often surround narratives of couples who were unable to bear children, who struggled with fertility, and reflect non-traditional births.

Ivan Toth Depeña

Jim Drain

Shark Tooth (Mauled), 2015

Cast bronze, Edition of 60

Artist Jim Drain originally created a limited-edition sculpture, Shark Tooth (Mauled), to support the mission and artist-centered programs of Cannonball. A long-time fan of the organization and a part-time resident of Miami, Drain captures the histories and mythologies of the sea with this bronze shark tooth. Cast from a real, and frighteningly large, shark tooth, each piece bears the impression of the artist's teeth—Drain literally bit each mold—rendering each edition unique. Continuing his playful investigation of materials, Drain's Shark Tooth (Mauled) cleverly blends personal childhood fantasies with universal fascinations and fears of the unknown that lurks just below the surface.

C-print

20 x 30 inches, edition of 25, 5 AP

Homemade Laptop Case was produced in conjunction with Mayer's 2013 exhibition Precipice/PostModem, which featured sculptural and installation work satirically exploring the concept of a technological singularity, the theoretical moment in time when the boundary between human and machine no longer exists. Mayer uses comedy as a means to inspire introspection about technology's place as a surrogate for spirituality in our lives, and implies that it is quickly becoming much more, regardless of whether or not the predictions of futurists like Ray Kurzweil come to fruition.

Shikeith

The Language Must Not Sweat, 2019

New limited edition produced in conjunction with upcoming exhibition by artist and filmmaker Shikeith. The Language Must Not Sweat. The Language Must Not Sweat, a five-channel video installation titled after an expression Toni Morrison used in a 1981 interview, mines what puddles at the core of the public and subconscious lives of black men. This immersive-installation ponders the symbolic moisture of blackness at the intersections of queerness and masculinity.

Phillip Smith

Balance, 2015

Edition of 10

The curious and psychologically-charged images in Smith's new works are drawn from found imagery in 1950s Cold War spy manuals, lingerie ads, books on mysticism and numerology, lost magic books and early genetic diagrams. Smith works the canvas like a physicist's blackboard where he can postulate new image formulations and equations. The result is a disorienting universe characteristic of Smith's long association with both pop culture and metaphysical practices.

Frances Trombly

Twill, 2014

Silkscreen on archival paper
14 x 20 inches, edition of 30

In this print design Trombly uses the printing process in the same way that she produces her sculptural fabric works. The patterning of horizontal and vertical lines are similar to the layering that develops in a weaving. These lines expose the printing process revealing each layer printed. Yet, keeping an overlap where a twill is created. The artist's hope is that the print is an emphasis on process, production and the making.

Crom@crópolis was produced in conjunction with Vega's exhibition "Sub-tropical Social Sculptures" on view at Locust Projects from November 15, 2014-January 2015.

Selected Exhibition History

Trenton Doyle Hancock: Texas 1997 - 2017, Art League Houston, 2017

Dressed Up, Kemper Museum of Contemporary Art, 2013 - 2014

In addition to the narrative tradition of his religious upbringing, Trenton Doyle Hancock immersed himself in graphic novels, comics, and Greek mythology; at the age of ten, he began creating characters as articulations of his experience as a Black youth in small-town Paris, Texas. In The Moundverse, Hancock has developed an extensive cast: altruistic Mounds, destructive Vegans, and mutated Bringbacks; TorpedoBoy is a tragically flawed hero who serves as the artist's alter ego; Undom Endgle is a color-wielding goddess who protects young souls, representing the force of the Black women who have affected and supported Hancock over the years. These characters and others explore timeless polarities like good and evil alongside related issues of race, class, identity, politics, and social justice.

Using the fantastical to grapple with the deeply personal has long been at the core of Hancock's artistic practice. Formally, this is seen in what the artist calls his "rough and tumble" aesthetic: Richly colored tactile surfaces are loaded with objects that range from bottle caps that the artist played with in childhood to bits and pieces of older works that have been rebirthed to create something entirely new. Drawing heavily from the temporal structure of comics, Hancock's practice seamlessly weaves storylines spanning long periods of time, often within a single artwork. The totality of his practice can be seen as an ever-expanding graphic novel in its own right, articulated through a variety of media.

Laced with personal memoir, Hancock's Moundverse is a metaphorical space that reflects the everyday world. Several works show TorpedoBoy in mid-stride, clad in football gear, wearing his "cutty black shoes" as he runs from evil-natured Vegans that at times take the aggregated form of a goofy-footed, cloaked member of the Ku Klux Klan (the Paris, Texas, of Hancock's youth had an active Klan). The malignant force that reaches for this distraught—albeit defiant—central character points to longstanding concerns of systematic racism and oppression.

ABOUT THE ARTIST

Trenton Doyle Hancock (b. 1974, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma) grew up in Paris, Texas. Hancock was featured in the 2000 and 2002 Whitney Biennial exhibitions, becoming one of the youngest artists in history to participate in this prestigious survey. In 2014, his exhibition Skin & Bones: 20 Years of Drawing was presented at the Contemporary Arts Museum in Houston, and traveled to Akron Art Museum; the Studio Museum in Harlem; and Virginia Museum of Contemporary Art. A solo exhibition of his work, Mind of the Mound: Critical Mass, will open at MASS MoCA in North Adams, Massachusetts, in 2019. His work has been the subject of one-person exhibitions at The Ringling Museum of Art; The University of South Florida Contemporary Art Museum; The Savannah College of Art and Design; The Weatherspoon Museum; The Modern Art Museum of Fort Worth; The Museum of Contemporary Art, North Miami; Institute for Contemporary Art at the University of Pennsylvania; Olympic Sculpture Park at the Seattle Art Museum; Fruitmarket Gallery; and Museum Boijmans Van Beuningen. Hancock's world has also been translated into performance in the original ballet Cult of Color: Call to Color, commissioned by Ballet Austin; and into site-specific murals for the Dallas Cowboys Stadium in Dallas and at the Seattle Art Museum's Olympic Sculpture Park.

The artist's work is in the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art, New York; The Whitney Museum of American Art; The Metropolitan Museum of Art; Brooklyn Museum; The Studio Museum in Harlem; San Francisco Museum of Modern Art; Baltimore Museum of Art; Columbus Museum of Art; The Contemporary Museum, Honolulu; The Cooper-Hewitt National Design Museum; Dallas Museum of Art; High Museum of Art; Museum of Fine Arts, Houston; Modern Art Museum of Fort Worth; Kemper Museum of Contemporary Art; Museo di arte moderna e contemporanea; Museum Boijmans Van Beuningen; Virginia Museum of Fine Arts; Andy Warhol Museum; and Wexner Center for the Arts at Ohio State University.
